Oolong Tea

Oolong Tea

Oolong tea offers tea enthusiasts a wide-ranging choice of styles, aromas, and flavors. As a group these teas are gloriously diverse, with a unique set of particulars regarding leaf style, color, oxidation level, and degree of roasting. But because there is much diversity in where and how these teas are made, and because of the overall complexity of oolong tea, each tea enjoys character traits that afford them individuality within their larger group.

SPRING POUCHONG OOLONG TEA - LOOSE LEAF

The Spring Pouchong Tea blend from English Tea Store is fresh and lively with a light astringent finish. Coming from one of the most beautiful tea producing places in the world, Spring Pouchong comes from Pinglin Township in Taiwan.

Pouchong comes from special bushes that grow on only a few tracts of land around the town. After plucking, the leaves are only allowed to oxidize for a limited amount of time before they are wrapped in paper and dried. Spring Pouchong is processed entirely by hand in the same manner it has been for 5 generations. This delivers one of the world's most exceptional teas, with fragrances of flowers and melon, and a rich, yet mild cup.
